

Share your experience with infusions and help increase the understanding of the impact on your life

Background

- IQVIA is a global research firm commissioned to conduct research the experience of patients who are receiving infusions.
- In this study you will not be asked to purchase or take any medication.

Purpose

- This research is being conducted on behalf of a pharmaceutical company. It will focus on your experience with infusions and how they impact your daily life.
- This research may help improve the scientific understanding of the impact of infusions on patients' life.

Getting Involved

- We are looking for patients aged 12 years and above who are receiving infusions as long-term treatment for a condition or disease, or on a continuing basis to prevent a condition or disease from occurring
- If you qualify through a brief online questionnaire, you will be invited to participate in a 60-minute telephone discussion with one of IQVIA's healthcare researchers.
- If you would like to participate, you will need to authorize your healthcare provider to share some of your health information with IQVIA. This will be a one-time request to confirm your diagnosis.
- Besides authorising your healthcare provider to confirm your diagnosis, you do not need to prepare for the interview other than be ready to talk about your experience receiving infusions.
- You can withdraw from the study at any time.
- You will be compensated for your time with a £50 cheque or Amazon voucher.

Next Steps

- To participate, please go to Link, email infusion-study@IQVIA.com to schedule a call to discuss our study via phone or receive written information about our study
- If you are eligible, you may be called on the phone to obtain your consent to participate, to see if you meet all requirements, and to schedule your interview.